

10.3 Institutional Approval and Review

Institutional approval (accreditation) is an on-going process by which the accrediting body assures itself that the Partner Institution (Education for Health) is able to provide a suitable environment for offering programmes of study and for meeting the quality assurance functions related to validated awards.

This is separate to the validation of programmes.

Further information is available from the relevant accrediting body via the Programme Lead.